The doors and sidewalks in front of the shop were packed with people anxious for a glimpse of the big knocker. Sullivan said he was feeling in fine health, although his present weight, 226 pounds, was about forty pounds in excess of his fighting weight. He said that after his California trip he had an engagement to meet Paddy Ryan in Boston, the same man whom he defeated in New Orleans. He said Ryan now only proposed to stand up four rounds. Sullivan said he could get no one to fight a match to determine which was the better man. He also said he would never enter the ring again, as the risk of going to prison was too great. He thought, however, that just as severe fighting could be done with the gloves as with bare fists, John L. Sullivan in Town.

The conclusion was reached, that if the girl was here she had been successful in concealing her indentity, and there was also a belief that the letter had been mailed from here as a blind.

VIOLENT FLUCTUATIONS Are Expected in the Chicago Markets

this Week, with an Upward Tendency.

(Special to The Indianapolis News.)
CHICAGO, October 30.—Wheat is the only active speculative market just now, and it has been lively enough of late to satisfy all the demands of both the bulls and bears. The sharp bulge of over two cents on Saturday caused a good many short contracts to be closed out, without notice, the brokers taking this action to save themselves from loss. For weeks past the market has been full of reckless bears, among them a young man named Matthews from Cincinnati, who start-ed trading with less than a thousand dollars and sold wheat until he was short 300,000 bushels. Several parties have been short, one to two million bushels apeice. Under this reckless trading, and this liberal supply of contracts, is it to be wondered at that the prospective legtimate situation has been completely overshadowed and any attempt to sustain prices crushed under an avalanche of contracts? Exporters never have checked and never will check a decline and the and never will cheek a decline and the change will come after some money has been lost on the short side and not before. The market has been very strong, but we may have a few more raids yet. Many good conservative men, however, have come over to the long side and local sentiment is gradually changing. It is the general feeling that wheat will be subject to violent fluctuations during this week, but prices seem tending to a much higher range.

subject to violent fluctuations during this week, but prices seem tending to a much higher range.

Unsatisfactory, unprofitable and uncertain appears to be the status of the provision trade. We have had a relatively light trade and prices have not changed materially except on the October option. A great many became imbued with the idea, some little time back, that the chances for a corner in pork, lard and short ribs for October was quite probable, and if this should prove the it was deemed advisable to be "long a little stuff." Acting on this hypothesis several parties purchased for this month's delivery and have been carrying the same, waiting for the corner tematerialize. But it did not materialize, and a few of the shrewder have been quietly getting rid of the product, and this has resulted in a shrinkage in values for October delivert. It was known that a considerable amount of lard was held here by an English syndicate, but they either became tired or were scared out by the promises of manufacturers to make lots of lard, and have been quietly letting go their holdings, and were scared out by the promises of manufacturers to make lots of lard, and have been quietly letting go their holdings, and not at a very handsome profit either, the shorts exhibiting great independence which was mainly due to liberal receipts of hogs. Pork and short riss were also offered very freely for this month's delivery by known long holders, but they were obliged to materially shade their original views as to the intrinsic value of the troperty before they could find buyers. These facts explain the large drop in values of October options as compared with the decline in the longer futures. It may be remarked with a good deal of truth that those parties who have purchased product during the past year on a prospect of a corner in this or that article have not reaped very handsome profits, but in the main lost money. Trade has dragged. Speculative orders continue very small for the season of the year, while the consumptive demand is far from urgent. Last year at this time buyers were taking hold with a good deal more alscrity, and at prices nearly double those now current, and it would seem that present prices ought to induce free purchases. The movement and manufacture of lard shows an increase in the supply of about 7,000 tierces, and the stock on hand may be estimated at 40,000 tierces against 26,000 tierces one year ago.

PERE HYACYNTHE lands in New York unnoticed. It takes Langtry and Ellen Terry to call out the tugs and steam yachts.

TELEGRAPH poles are coming down in Washington City, and wires going under ground. In New York, street cars have stoves in them. Both these excellent reforms will one day prevail in all cities.

The New York Herald and the Chicago Inter Ocean are agreed that "the greatest educator of this country, though its influence is unconsciously operative, is the daily newspaper." And a very "fragmentary" and slip-shod education some of them give.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR will, it is said, take strong grounds in his next message in favor of civil service reform, urging that the beginning made be strengthened and extended. If he does this he will not only show himself to have some of the qualities of statesman ship, but many of those of a shrewd politician. Civil service reform is likely to be a republican rallying point next year.

A most characteristic thing-characteristic of the democracy-is an interview with Milwaukee's rich man Alexander Mitchell, "regarding the possibility of his accepting the secretaryship of the treasury in case of a democratic president being elected in 1884." The democrats never have learned the first rule for cooking a bare: "First catch your hare." They have been resolving that that nimble animal was caught for nearly a quar ter of century.

A Boston dispatch expresses confidence in Butler's defeat. We can not gather from our Massachusetts exchanges whether this confidence is well founded or not. They are not out of the woods there yet and they don't "holler" much. If Butler is beaten "old line" democrats will refuse to vote for him, although the appeal to state pride founded on the allegation that he has slandered "old Massachusetts," may have a good deal of weight.

THE local colored folks met last night and had their say about the civil rights decision. We have had our say about it and find no occasion for objecting to any one else exercising the same right. We may pertinently add, however, that the tone and expression of the resolutions adopted are, in our opinion, unwise in the extreme. They invoke a principle which could be used for the very destruction of the colored race or any other race that might become obnoxious to the powers that be. They misconceive the import of the decision, abuse the supreme court in an unbecoming way, and, if they have any logical import at all, call for a centralized government of the strongest sort, in seeming unconsciousness that centralization means an iron rule under which the weakest suffer first. And who are the weakest in this country?

We commented yesterday upon the way in which the press of the country received the dictum of the press of New York city in matters of art. At the same time we said there had been notable exceptions. There was an exception in the case of Mrs. Langtry. Both press and people, when they saw for themselves, saw that the New York press had simply grossly flattered a prince's favorite, and they bluntly refused approval of the claims the New York press made for her. The popular judgment on Henry Irving will be quite as independent. It may agree with that of the New York press entirely; we trust it will. But it will be an independent judgment. We are told to-day of the overwhelming success of his initial appearance last night, in "The Bells." We trust he achieved such success. It is likely he did. In that, and in Charles I, it is said the characters he assumes go so thoroughly with his individuality as to constitute his best work, and that his faults are less apparent than in Hamlet and others of Shakespeare. But Mr. Irving has been so "worked" as a social event in New York, so backed by Lawrence Barrett's strong appeal, and his appearance bespoken as an opportunity for a reception as generous as London is now giving to Mary Anderson, that there is much room for doubt as to the way in which his merits will appeal to an American audience not at all connected with him by the social courtesy that New York is. Hence we say Mr. Irving will have to appear independent of New York judgment in the various cities which

New York, October 27.—The way to see Samuel J. Tilden is to go and see him. A friend, knowing whom I desired to visit, said to me: "Now this suggestion may save you a useless trip. To visit and return from Yonkers will cost sixty cents, and consumer no insignificant part of a day. Step down to 214 Broadway, take the elevator to the office of Andrew H. Green. Mr. Tilden is much of his time away; but if at home, Mr. have been law partners, and are yet very close chips off of the same block. After seeing Mr. Green, you will perhaps understand Tildes better anynow." I did as directed; and the man who managed the ropes as the elevator ascended, became communicative, 'Faith," he said, "and I has seldem seed such a day. It is now three in the afternoon and the rush continues exactly as if morning ad just began. Hardly expect to find time to take my lunch." Now, candidly, I can not define any relation between these remarks and the Hermit of Greystone, but I romised an old Quaker, before leaving ome, to faithfully record everything that struck me as well as to give

"I am writing for The Indianapolis News," was my answer, "and wish some information from Mr. Green."

Walking swiftly to another room, he turned in a moment and asked: "Is it of the governor you wish to inquire?" "Yes, sir; I desire to learn something about Governor Tilden."

"Just step into that oom." A large man, with iron grey hair, and the countenance of an army surgeon, was seated at a table writing very rapidly on arge lithographs, bound in which were turned by a crank. "Be seated. please," he said, motioning with his hand to a chair, and continuing to scrawl something on the lithographs as fast as the youth, also evidently in a hurry, could turn the leaves. "Well, sir," he continued, while his pen flew swiftly, "how can I serve

ANDREW H. GREEN.

Being favorably impressed with Andrew H. Green, a friend to whom I made mention of the fact later in the evening, told me the following, "Long years ago in Jannay court, off Wall street, was a sign which read 'Tilden & Green.' One is now the ex-governor of New York and the other is the excomptroller of the ctty, and that was their office for the practice of jurisprudence. Both were bachelors and both were very able lawyers. Mr. Green is now about sixty years old and he and Mr. Tilden have the fullest confidence in each other. Some thirty years ago Mr. Green was identified with the cause of education, and for a long time served on that board. As one of the time served on that board. When Mr. Tilden had broken down the Tweed ring In 1871, he induced Andrew H. Green to accept the position of deputy comptroller of this city, which the ring comptroller, Richard B. Connolly, through fear had been induced to offer to any one selected by Mr. Tidden or Mr. Charles O'Conor. Soon after this Connolly resigned and fled to Europe where he died in exile. Mr. Green was then appointed comptroller. By his fidelity the interests of the well nigh bankrupt city treasury he earned the sobriquet of "the watch dog" of the treasury, at a time when every claim had to be treated as a fraud until it was proved an honest one. The record of Mr. Green during the dark and eventful period of 1871, 1872 and 1873 in the annals of this city, justly established him in the respect 1871, he induced Andrew H. A little after 10 o'clock the next morning A little after 10 o'clock the next morning arranging myself in a barber's chair to be made presentable, a task that late sleeping and an early train had made impossible to be performed in this city, I said in a dreamy sort of uncertain way to a Yonkers tonsorial

"Yes," was the quick reply, "you come to see him? Yes there are hundreds coming to see him. His coachman will come down town presently. He often comes in here to have a bout with me. I'll tell him and he will gladly haul you out. He takes people out there and brings them back every day. I guess they go to see Governor Tilden on political business. "Lord," said John, "I have no idea," "Do you suppose," I asked, "that Tilden does himself?" "You bet he does," said John, "to the fraction of a cent. He keeps the run of everything. He knows all about his cattle and his crops, and then frequently in the city I drive him down to the bank and he works there from nine until three every day until the work is all straightened out." "What is Mr. Tilden's physical condition." I asked.

"Well, I only see him in his carriage. I once saw him talking with Mr. Green, at the depot. He appeared to me to be a very feeble old man, with only a little hold upon this life. I said to myself, Lord, is that Tilden, a man that some people talk about making president of these United States? I said to John one day. "The old man is surely not long for this world." 'I don't know about that,' said John. 'I didn't think that he would live to be governor of New York, and then I did not believe that he could stand the campaign of '76, but he did, and I don't know but that he is as busy now as he was then, and as weak as he looks to as he was then, and as weak as he looks to-day he will walk the legs off of most men on a level piece of road. They all say to one another as I drive them back in the carriage after seeing him, 'Did you ever see such a deceiving looking man as Tilden is?'"

THE SCRIBE'S OBLIGATIONS.

This, in a measure, is a full text of the gossip as given, with the exclusion of this monotonous question: "Does the razor pull?" He knew that it did not pull; but the query is an ingenious trick of the trade, by which the attention of us bearded creatures is called to the fact that the instruby which the attention or us bearded creatures is called to the fact that the instrument removing a week's growth is to the face as soft as sain. "Strategy, my boy; strategy all over." We see it in every department of life; in the court house and in the market place, where the woman attempts to beat the stail man down but finds at last that the barrel of apples she has purchased, while large and luscious at the top, after the first half bushel is decayed and seedling fruit. As I arose for the brush the question was asked: "How is the barber business in Indianapolis?" One good turn certainly deserves another. This gentleman had for some minutes entertained me, furnishing material with which to pad a letter, and I replied: "Though enjoying a speaking acquaintance with several Indianapolis barbers, I can not at this moment recall the name of one, but they are all well dressed, evidently well fed gentlemen and seemingly happy. The barbers of my native city, like sal information, exquisite conversation-sts, charging from ten to fifteen cents for many minutes talk and ostensibly getting on in the world."

Bidding my friend adieu I stepped upon the street.

AR EDITOR COMES FORWARD.

After dinner I found myself in a newspaper office. The jolly editor, who is two dollars to regular subscribers and has excellent facilities for job work, with a large patronage and rapidly growing circulatiou, standing by the party but hewing to the line regardless of where the chips fall, with the natural acuteness of his race by intuition divined the object of my visit to Yonkers, and saying that he had never yet had an opportunity to visit Greystone proposed accompanying me. It requires peculiar talent to establish a weekly newspaper in a country town and of cour e I was delighted with such company. "We only catch an occasional glimpse of Mr. Tilden in Yonkers as he goes in his carriage to from the depot or his yacht"—the editor continued. "A great many people come here and are disappointed to find him away. I guess that the old man feels that he has had enough of politics and proposes to take it easy from this time on."

"You are aware I suppose that there is large speculation throughout the country on the probability of Mr. Tilden being a candidate for president?"

"Oh yes, there is a great deal of writing to that effect in the newspapers, though but little of it here at Yonkers, where Mr. Tilden is understood. I do not think that he is physically able to endure the fatigue of a campaign or that he would care to be president. sically able to endure the latigue of a campaign or that he would care to be president. Indeed he has a better thing as you will realize after having visited Greyetone. However at a large meeting here the other night, the chairman of the democratic central committee, in a speech of great energy said 'the old ticket must be re-elected as a rebuke to the fraud of 76,' and I never heard a louder burst of applause."

I record this to show the conflict of opinion prevailing beneath the very shadow of

Mr. Tilden's country seat is about two miles out from Yonkers, and I commenced inquiring for a conveyance. "No you don't" said the editor "there is a livery stable around here owing me for advertising and job work." Hearing this, a bill against a livery stable, advertising and job work, I felt completely at home and appreciating that I was the guest of that most remarkable man, a country editor, surrendered myself uncon-THE JOURNEY OUT. a country editor, surrendered myself uncon-ditionally. But it seemed to be a busy day in Yonkers, and the only animals at hand that the keeper woulf insure, were panting in their stalls, just from a brisk drive. "You can have them after an hour? he said. "When the rich man rides he rides in chaises," When the poor man rides, he walks, be jasus." Besides, is not pedestrianism becoming fasionable in the highest circles, though it is not always preferable? But the resources of an editor are so infinite that even "a last resort" is generally avoided. A butcher's delivery wagon came rattling along. He struck briskly to the middle of the street and spoke with the driver. After a moment's parley he, if it were possible, somewhat sur-prised me by asking, "How will this do?" For the first time I now stood in doubt upon the order of going. But I reflected, if "not wholly convenient, this is eminently democratic, and this prepared me to obey the next command: 'Come on."

BLOWING UP THE COUNTRY. I will not attempt to describe the magnifi-I will not attempt to describe the magnificence of the country that stretches upon either hand along the way. The Hudson to the left is over a mile whee, washing the base of mountains, where, though much of the original grandeur yet provails, suggestive not only of shady sadness, but savage beasts, naws a country seat neettes. The buildings are great block of granite that might adorn the Thames or Rhine. Vast piles, part castle part palace, huge structures into which every known architectural design is pleasingly blended, impart a tremendous strength to the landscape. It a tremendous strength to the landscape. I is a bappy American characteristic to fre quently quarrel with American civilization. But after studying all that the world has to offer, it certainly retains the best. So it may possibly be with our architecture. Rattling along in a Yankee's butcher delivery wagon, to see our Uncle Samuel, I looked for the first time, on this stretch of Hudson, the

I record this for the reason that I am inform record this for the reason that I am informed that the iron man of destiny, carrying on his shoulders, never stalwart, the weight of sixty-nine years, a specter that enters every memory of Rutherford B. Hayes's administration, the object of a larger democratic solicitude than old Hickory himself ever awakened, walks the entire distance and apparently without fatigue.

MY LOQUACIOUS EDITOR FRIEND kept up a constant racket, calling my attention to things that might otherwise have es caped my observation, the mingling of field and forest, how cultivation has forced a rocky and unwilling soil to yield generously, a slight rustic bridge artistically thrown across a ribbon of water. that sings through a tiny rayine. But the magnificence of Greystone neither eclipses nor differs materially from many another gentleman's country seat on the Hudson.

the heavy door and invited us to enter.

REALLY WITHIN.

"I wish to speak with Mr. Tilden, if you please," was the language I addressed to him. Leading from the hall to a parlor waiting room, at a step so stately as to be absolutely overwhelming, for the grandeur of dignity in ebony transcends all other grandeur, he said solemnly, "Be seated, gentlemen. Will you send in your cards?" I happened to have a letter from Mr. W. H. English, which, with my credentials from The News, were entrusted to the sable citizen, and he silently stole away.

In e. News, were entrusted to the sable citizen, and he silently stole away.

I can not say exactly how many minutes elapsed, but we found time to canvass the various articles of the most exquisitely furnished room I ever looked upon.

Though the wood work was rich and heavy, the table in the center of the apartment awaring to have been placed there to heavy, the table in the center of the apartment appearing to have been placed there to stay, the upholstery, mirrors, tapestry and everything, examined separately, were shown to be of wonderful brilliance; the effect was subdued by an arrangement of colors and a light, such as Father Cox, the artist, might, leaving the easel, softly flood his last painting, for the gratification of an appreciative visitor, into a miracle of delicate modesty. A mild, splittual atmosphere, like that in which a tidy Quakeress might be supposed to move, seemed to pervade the house.

EVIDENCE OF LIFE.

While sitting the seconds must have towered into minutes. During this time bells were continually jingling calls at different doors. Several were answered by landar some were mere sum doors. Several were answered by laddes; some were mere summonsee perhaps to another part of the house. "You see," said the editor, now speaking in a tone unusually low for him "those angels gliding here and there and all over. They are the governor's nieces. He has always been pretty good that way, I understand, but he keeps them humping. It is against his religion, perhaps, to have any idlers about him."

Presently a very pleasant faced young man entered the room at a quick step, and addressing me by name returned the letters and asked "What is your object in wishing to see Governor Tildens" "Merely to pay my respects to an American citizen of his history and speak with one whom I greatly admire," was my reply. "The governor has no expressions of opinion for the press, of importance to the public, and if you do not design interviewing him I expect that he will be glad to see you." The speaker was the private secretary, Mr. George W. Smith, NO PLACE FOR AN INTERVIEWER.

DIFFICULT TO DESCRIPE.

Glancing at this gentleman, concerning whom so much has been written. I realized the impotency of the pen as a photographic instrument. He never has and never will be described to the satisfaction of mankind, for the reason that no two persons will ever see him alike. That shaking hand, low whisper, coupled with his firm step, the keen glance of his eye, the energetic movement of his right hand, his erect and dignified bearing must ever surround him with something of an impenetrable mystery.

SECRET OF HARRISON'S DEFEAT FOR GOVER-

I want here to record a bit of history that I do not remember ever having seen in print. Bayliss W. Hanna was a member of the committee authorized to apprise Mr. Tilden of the result of the St. Louis convention in '76. He came on to New York to perform the duty assigned and returned to Indiana with confidence. He stopped at Indianapolis for some days to appropriately enjoy being the lion of the hour. He had met face to face Samuel Jones Tilden, that glorious amalgamation of Crosus, Solor, and the Father of his Country. The deto tment of the Wabash statesman was such as if he had experienced a new revelation. Bayl'ss Hanna no longer taught democratic doctrine upon the street corners and in the market places. As a matter of fact, the Bayliss Hanna who returned from New York to Indiana was widely different from the Bayliss Hanna who left Indiana for New York. Whenever he had any intelligence to impart, and he was full of it, he would take a man into a chamber, found to be vacant after having looked under the bed and under the rug, or if that was inconvenient he would lead him out behind the house. Then he would begin to whisper, "I want to tell you that Mr. Tilden is going to be president and that he is the greatest man in America. When I met him in New York he came stealthily to my room at the appointed minute and spoke as if the walls might have had ears. Indeed he put his face close to my ear and whispered." Hanna never told anything of particular importance that Mr. Tilden had said; the manner of saying it was the burden of his song. Immediately the young democracy of the whole state took to whispering, and that, more than anything else tended to confound Ben Harrison. He could not understand it, and got to believing there must be something awful in the wind.

THE MERTING.

THE MEETING.
Shaking each of us by the hand the Governor took a seat very close to me on the sofa, making some inquiries concerning Indiana people. I found myself talking in reply as freely as I communicated with the editor after he had informed me that a livery stable keeper owed him for advertising and job work. Presently he asked "Would you like to walk to the piazza." Taking my arm he led through a long hall to a rear door. This being bolted, he lifted a bolt and opened a pannel that must have required considerable strength. The Hudson here is over a mile wide, comes up to within one hundred yards of this point, the ground steeply descending to the water. For a hundred yards or more from the shore the river is too shallow for the yacht to make a landing, but anchoring the yacht to make a landing, but anchoring out in the stream, Mr. Tilden is pulled to the bank in a small boat and then he pulled himself up hill and to his chamber without assistance. The prospect from the plazza is certainly one of infinite beauty, grouping as it does the great stream, active with commerce and travel, and the most delightful scenery upon either side, comprising woodland, orchard, field, meadow, and mansions, in which a king might live. All the guests of Greystone enjoy this, but no one better than Mr. Tilden himself. Standing the my side pointing out new heavilies in the by my side, pointing out new beauties in the landscape, he had to me the air of an old farmer conducting a delighted visitor over his premises. The day was dark and this he very much regretted OTHER VISITORS.

"If you like eattle, I want to show you some Jerseys," presently the Governor said, and laying his band lightly on my arm began leading back the way we had come. Just then the secretary approached and announced Mr. Somebody, of Michigan and Judge Somebody-else of some where, cut west or down south perhaps. "Well, having to entertain other visitors I cannot accompany you in your stroll, but Mr. Smith," meaning his secretary, "will accompany you." I then said retary, "will accompany you." I then said good-bye. The editor came up and said: "ADIEU, MR. PRESIDENT.

"ADJEU, MR. PRESIDENT."

The governor, bowing, smiled. I have not purposely lost sight of the editor man, though he was not with me while Governor Tilden was talking. He had Mr. Smith and another gentleman whose name I do not remember, on a far end of the piazza and was reading to them a slashing leader for next week's to them a slashing leader for next week's paper. Passing the room where we had waited, two old parties, one a fat and the other a lean party—all kinds of people call at Greystone-were waiting to be received by Mr. Tilden. I walked out of the door ENGLISH ON TILDEN.

I remembered now, for the first time persps, having asked W. H. English in the all of 70, after he had returned from New Ork: "Is Mr. Tilden a great man?" "One if the greatest men of the age," was the rely. "But I had talked with him full ten invites and it was not until he had become ninutes, and it was not until he had become eye that I realized being in such a presence." I thought of this seriously as I walked away from Mr. Tilden, and more seriously when Mr. Smith, in answer to a question by the editor, replied: "Yes, the governor spends several hours every morning with the pa-pers." And Greystone is connected with New York by a private telegraph and a pri-rate telephone.

vate telephone. Then I remembered that Bliss, the prose cutor, once in reply to certain strictures by Mr. Hendricks, said that Tilden, by the aid of private detectives, had all the evidence of the Star-route frauds in hand as early as the Star-route frauds in hand as early as '78, several weeks before the government, with all of its fast resources, ferreted out the crime. Mr. Tilden had collected this voluminous testimony while his health, according to the statement of a physician and friends, certainly ebbed lower than it does to-day. Remembering all this I now knew that the judgment of W. H. English was EMINENTLY CORRECT.

Lyond read him as a genial old country.

English was

ENINENTLY CORRECT.

I would read him as a genial old country gentleman of sufficient fortune to enjoy leisure, well pleased to be visited and a trifle proud of his family, his house, his farm, his stock, the view from his plazza, and all that is his. I know that this opinion was shared by the editor, for after we were well under way from Greystone to Yonkers, among a hundred other thingshe observed was this: "Well after you get into him Tiden is a real nice old man, isn't he." A few visitors will surely see him as Henry Watterson saw him, firm, sinewy and energetic with life. Others will see him as he was interpreted by Laura Resm in '76, "a frail, listless old man, mellow for the tomb." After a close study of him I no more believed the New York Sun, that "Mr. Ti'den is physically disqualified for the work of a campaign," than the Louistille Courier-Journal, when it remorselessly emblazons, "that no power under heaven could induce Mr. Tilden to accept the presidency, much less a nomination." TO BE SURE HE WILL ACCEPT. Disclaiming any thought of persona wrong in the matter, he has said "That it wrong in the matter, he has said "That in the methods of seating R. B. Hayes, the greatest wrong that everstained our national annals, was perpetrated." Would the author of that sentiment whose name must ever be associated with the alleged fraud of '70, condone that crime by refusing a place at the head of the ticket in a political movement that is claimed all along the line to be a vindication of history? Go talk with a forked tongue for many moons to the Utes and that is claimed all along the line to be a vindication of history? Go talk with a forked tougue for many moons to the Utes and Apaches, but please spare an infinitely intelligent and versatile member of the Hoosier press. The world's pulse is felt every day by the hermit of Greystohe, and whatever there is of lassitude in this quarter, or of throbbing life in that, is known to him. And in this madness of regret, by Charles A. Dana, that Mr. Tilden, the one man of America, with the exception of the Holman who did not invent the liver pad,—to whose name a principle of reform attaches, is physically incapable of campaign labor, and Henry Watterson, who proclaims as one having authority, "that no influence on the earth or in the waters beneath the earth, could induce" this grand old man to leave the orchard where he loves to climb, his cattle, his chickeus and rural surroundings and accept the chief magistracy of the republic, there is certainly some method. I had reason to believe it before coming to New York; I know it nov.

A WALK ABOUT THE GROUNDS showed us slock—no large berd of cattle or flock of sheep, nor number of horses, but of such breed as must be worth a small fortune. Presently we were joined by an Irish-American, who has the farm in charge, and a running conversation between him, Mr. Smith and the editor drew out many points of interest.

"Ob. no, she was a favorite and he would not think of that," was the reply.
"I suppose," I said to the farmer, "that everything grown here costs the governor much more than if he were to buy it at market." "Indeed it does not," was the reply. "Governor Tilden would be heartily ashamed of that kind of farming. It is his pleasure to make the farm profitable and discover new economies and better methods. Yes, indeed, the farm pays." a proportionale number of vegetables are consumed. Yes, indeed, the farm pays."

After looking at some sheep with black legs, and walking from the meadow to the stable and talking to the horses, petting and communicating with two friendly St. Bernards, shapely fellows, who though of the same litter would quarrel like mad, Mr. Smith said, when one received more attention than the other—dogs are full of human nature—some of them even to the love of mutton—we bade adieu to Mr. Smith, the gentleman who had so kindly conducted us over the place, and started on conducted us over the place, and started on the return trip to Yonkers. But the editor evidenced a happy faculty of combining bus-iness with pleasure. "Please tell Governor Tildenthat I shall enroll him as a regular yearly subscriber." "Oh, that is all right," said Mr. Smith, "we want to read of the local events in Youkers. Send on your paper and send in the bill."

FRENCH FIENDS.

Horrible Atrocities Committed by the Invaders of Annam Between France Mail advices show that the French forces in their encounters in the vicinity of Hanoi, early in September, met the Chinese regulars well armed and officered. After a conflict of three days, during which the French took some of the enemy's works, they withdrew, leaving Hai Phong still in the hands of the enemy. Some troops of the king of Annam were with the enemy. A letter from Saigon states that unheard-o cruelties were committed near Hue on the occasion of its capture by French sailors, order that there should be no quarter given men, women or children. Three hundred Annamites ficeing to the bay of Thuan were all shot. One hundred and fifty more drifting in a just without arms or oars, were also massacred. Figure declares that Admiral Conrbet, at the instance of Commissioner Harmand, allowed the perpetration of such acts in order to terrorize the Annamites.

Temps denies that Admiral Courbet gave such orders, but admirs that 1,200 of the enemy were slain at Thuan.

The publication in Paris of the Yellow

The publication in Paris of the Yellow Book, consisting of garbel dispatches relating to the China-Tonquin business, has been swiftly followed by the appearance of the full text of Marquis Tseng's last dispatch, embodying a forcible and pungent exposure of the French pretensions, a definite refusal to accept the French proposals for a neutral zone on the southern frontier of China and for opening the interior to commerce, even as a basis for discussion. The French ministry are hoping that the arrival of reinforcements in November will be followed by some military exploit which may enable them either to renew the pressure on China, or else to er to renew the pressure on China, or else to retire decently. Clemenceau in the meanretire decently. Clemenceau in the mean-time announces that he will oppose any vote whatever for fresh troops.

War with China is nearer than ever. The exchange of dispatches between Marquis Tseng and Challemel-Lacour shows fierce ill temper on both sides, and uttterly irreconcilable claims. The general impression is that China wants to fight. While the war divides parties at home hopelessly, the government is denounced by the Orleanists as stupid, and by the Reds as wicked. Clemenceau will not consent to convent consent to operations on a large scale. Ferry hopes for a big victory, to carry all France with him, and Challemel-Lacour does not believe in the courage of China. The Cherokees Decreasing.

THE OLD TICKET.

Passing a peculiar breed of geese, which Mr. Smith informed us were foreigners, though the governor had secured the flock originally from a friend in Cincinnati, the editer remarked: "Please say to the governor that I will give him a ten line puff and come out hot for 'the old ticket' if he will will give me one goose egg." "Ob, I will say in advance." replied Mr. Smith, "that you can have the egg, as soon as the season comes, for the puff. The governor can use that in his business. But as for 'the old ticket,' we will not think of it out here, especially the Tilden part of it. We greatly admire 'the old ticket,' Mr. Smith continued, "and certainly would not be displeased to see so much of it as does not relate to Governor Tilden made a new ticket, but Greystone is scili against 'the old ticket' as a whole." "These cattle are mostly imported;" I asked: Many of them are imported, and all are registered," replied the farmer, "Queen of the North' he continued, pointing to an aristocratic Jersey cow, "is worth $5,000." "This is Daisy," fondling another Jerrey beauty. "Her milk is 30 per cent, cream."

"Does Governor Tilden cultivate the personal acquaintance of his cattle!"

"Oh, yee, he is very much in love with them. He has been a cattle man all his life, kept land that he might the better keep a small herd. A fresh Jersey cow was always in one of the stalls of his city stable, and he changes them to and from the farm, to prevefit injury." To Parents and Others The Orphans' Home, e have had a great improvement in the th of our children by the use of Swift's cific We had among the children some who sorofula—notably one case in which it was UNNISTAKABLY HEREDITARY.

we got some of Swift's Specific and gave it to this case, and in a short while it was cured sound and well. It was as bad a case, I think, as I over saw, and had been under excellent physicians with no permanent benefit. We have been giving it to all the children as a health tonic. We have four children and one seamstress who, for years, have suffered intensely every spring with eryspelas, and though they had been taking Swift's Specific only in small doses as a health tonic, they all, without exception, passed through this springly without a touch of the complaint.

A young lady of the institution, who has been with us for years, has been troubled with a most aggravated rash ever since she was a child, she tried all the known remedies that are prescribed for it with no benefit; but she has been cured by taking Swift's Specific, and has had no return of the trouble.

It is such an excellent tonic, and keeps the blood so pure, that the system is less liable to-centract disease. All of these teachers and children who are old enough to know agree with me in believing it is the greatest medicine knows. My faith in it is unbounded, and I and my assistants take great pleasure in recommending it to every one. I can at all times be found at the Home, and will take pleasure in scelleg or corresponding with any who is interested in the remedy.

THEIR CIVIL RIGHTS.

The Colored Men of Indianapolis Again Denounce the Supreme Court-

Speeches and Resolutions. The second meeting of colored citizens to consider the decision of the supreme court on the civil rights law was held at the Second Baptist church last evening. Rev. J. I. Winyard presided with Charles Stepp as secretary. Mr. Winyard, in taking the chair said that when he first came into the world he kicked and that he did not intend to cease kicking until the black man had every door in the country opened to him. He said the colored man could enforce rights with the ballot;

if the republican party should prove treacherous, down must come the republican party. This last remark was re-ceived in silence by the audience.

W. W. Bagby, Henry Ragon, Anderson Simmons, W. H. Dade and Horace Heston were appointed a committee on resolutions Hon. J. Sid. Hinton said he had felt ag grieved the other evening when Congressman Peelle said that the colored people of Indiana enjoyed all the rights be himself did, when he should have known that there were at least five laws in the statutes of Indiana against them. The word "white" had not been struck from the militia laws of the state, and the children were allowed, by sufferance, public school privileges. He said the supreme court's decision was a monstrous one and had set the colored race back where it was when emanchation took place.

strous one and had set the colored race back where it was when emancipation took place.

J. T. V. Hill, a colored lawyer, held that the civil rights bill was constitutional and necessary. He said the objection to the state iaw against the internarriage of whites and blacks was that it presumed the black race to be inferior to the white. He said the colored people were now left to shape out their own political destiny, and he thanked God for it.

Alfred Harrison asked how could the civil thanked God for it.

Alfred Harrison asked how could the civil rights bill be unconstitutional unless the amendments were also unconstitutional? He held that the black man was not a beggar, but that everything he had received from the general government had been deserved, and cited the valor of colored troops during the war.

I. E. Christy said the colored people had better say less about discrimination against them until they learned not to discriminate against themselves, illustrating his point by inability of a black man to get shaved in a colored barber shop. He said the race—if let alone, would work out its own destiny. The committee on resolutions then reported the following which were adouted:

oried the following which were adopted:

"Whereas, The late decision of the supreme court declaring the supplea entary civil rights bill unconstitutional, null and void, thereby overturns and defeats the crowning work of the glorious results of the agitation for the abolition of slavery, the war for the union and the reconstruction acts: therefore, be it "Resolved, That we deplore and denounce this unjust, oppressive and retrogressive decision of the supreme court as a triumph of tyranny, race prejudice, states' right and secession bigoty. poried the following which were adopted:

of patriots who, by their self-sacrificing action and devotion to the principles of human liberty, emancipated a race and regenerated a hation.

Resolved, That we thank the republican party for what it has heretofore done in our behalf, and trust that it will not weary of the struggle until the great principles which called it into being are established and recognized as law throughout the land.

The meeting then adopted a resolution commending the action of Edward Horn, editor of the World, in bringing suit against a restaurant keeper on Pennsylvania street for refusing to sell meals to him on account of his color.

"MY PARTNER," AT ENGLISH'S.

Bartley Campbell's "best play" was well presented in excellent style, at English's, last night, to a good audience. All the parts were well taken, especially those assumed by Aldrich and Parsloe. The "Wing Le" of the latter is generally accepted as the best representative of the Celestial ever seen upon the stage, while the blinf, hearty and warmhearted "Joe Saunders" of Mr. Aldrich is drawn true to life. Miss Dora Goldthwaite sustained her part with credit, and the rest sustained her part with credit, and the rest of the cast was satisfactory. The play will be repeated to-night and to-morrow after-

MODIFSKA.

The four performances to be given by Modjeska, beginning to-morrow night, are the last Indianapolis will ever see by her. At the end of this season she will go to Europe for a time and then retire from the stage. Before she was known to the splendid fame which is now her heritage, Indianapolis recognized her. In her first attempts in English she came this way and Indianapolis at once paid tribute to the genius which has since been universally acknowledged. It is likely that now this city will give her a farewell as earnest as its welcome of her was. She plays as "Imogene," as "Adrienne" and as "Rosalind" ou the three nights, and at the matinee as Gilberte in Frou-Frou.

Recent Rains.

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News:

A communication in the Journal this morning ascribes the recent rains to the exhaintion of moisture by planets. It is astonishing, that after the publication of systematic weather observations all ever the northern hemisphere, especially so in the United States, where these observations have been recorded at the signal offices in many places five times a day and where the synchronous observations have been alily published in many papers and periodicals; that specialists will continue to base their ideas on atmospheric phenomena, on their favorite hobbies only. Let B. examine the weather bulletins as filed at the signal office here since Friday or Saturday, and he readily will see where the water and atmospheric conditions, which caused the recent rains, come from. There evidently was nothing local about it.

Street Nulsances. Street Nuisances.

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News.

For one I am glad to hear the statement of the Rev. O. C. McCulloch in vesterday evening's paper, containing the fact that all proper relief would be furnished street beggars by the Friendly Inn and the organized charities. And now I want to know in the interest of long suffering denizens of Washington street, if we can not have some relief from the tormenting and exasperating squeaking and doleful accordeons and handorgans, which for days and evenings make the hours hideous by their obtrusive and contemptible discords. Other cities abolish these nuisances. Can not we?

MARKET REPORT.

Indianapolis Wholesale Market-Daily Report.

Dry goods may be quoted in a very healthy condition with every indication that they will continue so during the entire winter. Matters from a grocery point of view are not significant of any sensational outcome, as the spirit of tameness is over all. Coffees have enlisted at-tention from their sudden stiffening after so long a depression, but the buying and con-suming public are not agitated, and believe a policy of indifference the most profitable. Late dispatches give a steady market, with only a fair amount of active trading. A syndicate of traders exists in New York and Rio who control the larger part of coffee affout and in sight at Rio, and it is by such means that they hope to realize a hand-some profit. B. G. Arnold, the ex-coffee king, who is eighty years old and gray, but fill active as a boy, is said to be at the head of this ring. Sugars are very dull and easy and quotations nominal. Owing to the necessity of realizing on the part of Maryland country packers, tomatoes are de-ressed and lower; other canned goods steady. As de from an increased local demand, the market for miscellaneous produce shows very little change. Packers of eggs have advanced prices ic owing to a stronger shipping outlet DICKSONS'

One Night Only—IUesclay, October 30.

The Champion Puglist's Tour Across the Continent. An Ovation at every point. Thousands tuned away at each Performance from the Largest Amusement Houses in the Country. Embracing the best known Boxers living. John L. Sullivan, Champion of the World: Herrer A. Slade, the Great Maori; Steve Taylor, Pete M'Coy, Mike Gillespie, Frank Morgan, and other notables. Scenes of the famous Madison Square contest re-enacted by Sullivan and Slade. John L. Sullivan has vanquished forty-three persons, the first being Steve Taylor, ex-beavy weight champion, the last H. A. Stade, the Maori. He will appear twice during each exhibition—first with Steve Taylor, second and wind up with Herbert A. Slade. To demonstrate the immense popularity of the World's Champion the receipts at Madison Square Garden, for the last three performances, in which he was the central figure, reached the enormous amount of $5*, 60. A fine band in attendance.

The Mænnerchor entertainment will take pluce to morrow evening.

David D. Long has been appointed receiver of the Central Printing company.

David Christison, who assaulted Jerry Campbell, was given a preliminary examination by the mayor this morning, who dismissed the "intent to kill" and assessed a penalty of $25 and costs, with ten days in jall.

Ex-Policeman Boardman, now a farmer near Broad Ripple, reports a rise in White river of twelve and a balf eet, and that the water having broken over the Westfield pike, is doing some damage to his farm.

A meeting of persons interested in the Industrial Horticultural colony of Indiana and California will be held at the mayor's office this evening. This organization is controlled by responsible Thorntown parties.

The Cohn Bros. & Co., of Cincinnati, attachment proceedings against Daniel G. Carter et al, of Bloomingdale, has been dismissed in the Federal court, a compromise having been reached, and the stock released from the care of the marshal.

The Potato Peddlers.

Some "potato peddlers" have taken deep offense over the expose of their do ngs in The News, of yesterday, and this morning a half-drunken guffer wanted it unders tood there was a "hereafter." There may be 'two hereafters" but if the parties interested expect to silence comment by intimidation they may run afoul of an obstacle. The News will have more to say as it has the space. The article has met with general endorsement, and one gentleman took occ sion to say that he was surprised that the swindling methods employed in this business had not sooner been exposed. "This city" he said, "is overrun in the spring and fall with gangs from Louisville and Cincinnati who work the town in the way described, and then skip out. There are some pretty square fellows, who stay the year round, and they are reasonably honest because they want to build up a regular trade. But the way these outside scamps run the business puts a cloud on everybody engaged in it. What The News said pretty nearly covered the ground. Keep it up."

Rev. C. C. Herriott received a telegram this morning, stating that the congregation of the First Presbyterian church, of St. Paul, Minn., last night unanimously voted to extend him a pestoral call, and as the field is inviting there is little doubt but that he will immediately accept and leave for his new post within ten days. There is also a pressing invitation for him to go to the Memorial Tabernacle church at St. Louis, Mr. Herriott has been pastor of the Twelfth church, this city, for the past six years, and while his congregation and a host of friends outside will regret the severance of tics which have been very pleasant during the years of his ministry, they rejoice in the fact that he has been called to a field where his opportunities for usefulness are increased and enlarged.
